

Vivian Lee

Vivian Jean Lee was born and raised in Montreal. She studied trombone with Douglas Burden at the University of Ottawa, Ted Griffith at McGill University, and Albert Devito at the Université de Montréal. Ms. Lee played with l'Orchestre Symphonique de Montréal from 1990 until her retirement in 2021, first under Charles Dutoit and then under Kent Nagano. Before that she was a member of the Hamilton Philharmonic and Orchestra London Canada. In addition to touring the world with the OSM, she has appeared as a soloist and clinician at the International Trombone Festival on two occasions, and taught for several years at McGill's Schulich School of Music. Her husband, David Martin is a retired trombone player and teacher, and her grown son, Travis, and daughter, Erica, are both involved in the arts.
